History of Howard University

Since 1867, Howard has awarded more than 100,000 degrees in the professions, arts, sciences and humanities. Howard ranks among the highest producers of the nation's Black professionals in medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, engineering, nursing, architecture, religion, law, music, social work and education.

The University has long held a commitment to the study of disadvantaged persons in American society and throughout the world. The goal is the elimination of inequities related to race, color, social, economic and political circumstances. As the only truly comprehensive predominately Black university, Howard is one of the major engineers of change in our society. Through its traditional and cutting-edge academic programs, the University seeks to improve the circumstances of all people in the search for peace and justice on Earth.

Howard has grown from a single-frame building in 1867 and evolved to more than 89 acres, including the six-story, 400- bed Howard University Hospital. Since 1974, it has expanded to include a 22-acre School of Law West Campus, a 22-acre School of Divinity East Campus, another three-fifths of an acre facility in Northwest Washington and a 108-acre tract of land in Beltsville, Maryland.

Howard prepares men and women to advance social justice and the preservation of human liberty. In each of its 14 schools and colleges, Howard University seeks to develop technically competent and morally committed individuals. The University's library system contains more than 1.8 million volumes, including the Channing Pollock Collection. The Moorland-Spingarn Research Center (MSRC) is recognized as one of the world's largest and most comprehensive repositories for the documentation of the history and culture of people of African descent in Africa, the Americas and other areas worldwide.

The University competes in 21 varsity sports, including:

Basketball

Football

Golf

Indoor and Outdoor Track

Bowling

Lacrosse

Softball

Swimming

Tennis

Volleyball

Soccer

Cross Country

Regarded as one of the most prestigious institutions of higher learning, current enrollment approximates 10,000 students from virtually every state, the District of Columbia, and more than 70 countries. The University traditionally has had the largest gathering of Black scholars across the globe.

Letter From the Chair

Dear Howard University Community,

Howard University was founded two years after the end of the Civil War. Although active hostilities between military forces of the North and South had ceased, the country remained deeply divided, and the path forward remained unclear. Society was on the brink of massive change – but exactly what that change would look like was impossible, at that moment, to say.

Today, it has been three years since the onset of the coronavirus pandemic, the most devastating and disruptive force to have overtaken our national and global societies in generations. And although having now experienced a full academic year with the majority of our student body residing on campus and largely attending classes in person, it may be tempting to assume we are approaching a return to normalcy, once again, it remains unclear what lasting changes this most recent disruption will ultimately have wrought upon our lives.

In moments of great disorder and uncertainty, Howard Bison have a tendency to look in two directions simultaneously:

We look to our past for the lessons, guidance, and consolations of history, and to one another, for support.

From the vantage of the present day, it is clear how the founding of Howard University guides and instructs us to move forward. Against all odds and all obstacles, we must safeguard the education of the Black community. Our founders understood that a university like Howard was the best way to both empower men and women recently freed from bondage, and to propel the country toward greater prosperity.

Despite the pandemic and recent bomb threats, it is essential that we continue to fulfill the promise of Howard's founders by continuing to provide educational opportunities to those who might not get such opportunities elsewhere.

To ensure our security and wellbeing as we persist in the mission of our University, it is vital – indeed essential – that we strengthen the ties of community that bind us together. For what enabled Howard's most auspicious origins were not only the principles and vision upon which it was founded; but the fact that it was created by a group of like-minded individuals who came together to support a most worthy, far-sighted, common cause. It was the fabric of this extraordinary community, the warp and weft of it – a community comprised of people of different races and genders – that endowed Howard with the strength to endure and overcome any challenges she might face.

As we reflect upon this past year and look forward to the years ahead, let us continue to strengthen our internal community so that Howard University may better serve our nation, and our world.

In Truth and Service, respectfully,

Laurence C. Morse, Ph.D. (BA '73) | Chairman of the Board of Trustees

Letter From the President

Dear Howard University Community,

Our presence as a University and the manner in which we conduct our institution sends a statement to the rest of the world. This year, we demonstrated and communicated our resilience and our fortitude. When there are those who seek to disrupt, disturb, and distract us from our mission, our presence is a statement that we will not be deterred.

When the pandemic began to strike the United States in full force, with particular devastation targeted to the Black community, we never once entertained shutting down our institution, even as we worked to migrate large swaths of our community away from campus and transition operations to a new and unfamiliar virtual environment.

The same ethos has permeated our community in the face of incessant bomb threats this year. Clearly, there are those who want to slow down or put an end to what we do on our campus. It is critical that we do not allow these harassments to deflect us away from the purpose that has brought each of us to Howard University.

The Black community is no stranger to these sorts of threats, both real and fabricated. Since our founding in 1867, Howard has always been a source of fear and a target of violence for those who wish to undermine the pursuit of justice and enshrine the unequal status quo in our society.

What we do in our classrooms, in our laboratories, in our libraries, in our hospital, is too important to stop. Howard University is too vital to fail or fall short.

We have never before enabled, and we will not now begin to allow tactics of intimidation to affect how we educate our students at Howard. External pressure must not be permitted to dictate what, why and how we teach our students. On the contrary, threats of this nature only reinforce the vital mission of our hallowed and historic University and the motivation that fuels us to study, to work, to teach, and to learn.

I am immensely and eternally grateful to our students for their flexibility and determination; to our staff members whose critical work behind the scenes facilitates so much of our students' educational experiences; and to our illustrious faculty, our professors and lecturers who shape so much of our students' educations, the truths we reveal as a University; and the service we provide as an institution of higher education. During times of stability and times of tumult, it is the people of Howard University who convey unwaveringly the principles upon which we were founded and the principles upon which we still stand.

Excellence in Truth and Service,

Wayne. A. I. Frederick, M.D., MBA | Charles R. Drew Professor of Surgery

Howard University Announces $785 Million Investment to Accelerate Renovations and Construct New Academic Centers

In March, Howard University officials announced plans for the largest construction real estate initiative in the institution's history. The University will invest $785 million to build three new state-of-the-art multidisciplinary academic halls and renovate several existing structures, including the historic Myrtilla Miner Building, that will house the School of Education, and the Howard University Middle School for Mathematics and Science. The new academic centers will house teaching and research in health sciences; arts and communications; and associated science, technology, engineering, and mathematics programs. The new construction projects are slated to begin this year and are expected to be completed by 2026. Emerging from continued improvement in the University's ratings and in conjunction with the priorities established in the Howard Forward strategic plan, this is by far the largest real estate investment in Howard University's history.

The historic investment is part of a phased Central Campus

Master Plan (CCMP). Announced in 2020, the CCMP serves as the University's roadmap for the long-term transformation of Howard's main campus through capital improvements that align with the University's mission and vision. These efforts are made possible in part because of enrollment growth, increased philanthropic and public investment in the University, and the University's efforts to build financial strength as outlined in the five-year strategic plan.

Of the $785 million real estate investment, $670 million will be used to fund three new academic centers: the Health Sciences Complex, which will house the College of Medicine, College of Dentistry, College of Pharmacy and the College of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences; the Center for Arts and Communications, which will house the Chadwick A. Boseman College of Fine Arts and the Cathy Hughes School of Communications; and the STEM Center, which will house various STEM programs and disciplines including physics, chemistry, biology, engineering, mathematics and associated labs.

"I have a foundational confidence in who I am and everything that I can accomplish, and Howard showed me the limitless possibilities that lie ahead."

Financials

Financial Overview for Fiscal Year 2022

The University ended fiscal year 2022 with operating results of $159 million compared to $204 million in fiscal year 2021. The positive results evidence continued philanthropic generosity and steadfast fiscal management. Fiscal year 2022 revenues and expenses reflect a return to campus and more normal operations, specifically with respect to auxiliary services.

In fiscal year 2022, consolidated operating revenues increased 8% or $87 million to $1.15 billion. The revenue increases are primarily attributed to more student enrollment, a rebound in auxiliary services as students, faculty and staff returned to campus, and strategic monetization of real property in line with the University’s Central Campus Master Plan.

Operating expenses rose 15% or $133 million to $990 million. The University faced the common challenge of rising inflation and economic uncertainty faced by many higher education institutions. Although expenses accelerated more than revenues during FY 2022, the University’s leadership was successful in maintaining a net operating surplus through careful management and decision-making. This resulted in the second largest operating results in recent history, demonstrating the effectiveness of efforts in balancing the budget and ensuring financial stability for the University. Despite the economic uncertainty, the University demonstrated its commitment to retaining talented faculty and staff and ensuring their financial wellbeing by increasing compensation. The average faculty pay increased 20% - and because of this action, more than 600 faculty members saw their annual base salaries increase. The University’s long-term goal is to offer salaries that are in line with faculty compensation at peer institutions.

Howard’s balance sheet is well positioned to support the University’s long and short-term financial needs. As of June 30, 2022, financial assets & liquidity resources that were available within one year for general expenditures totaled $467MM, including $75MM line of credit.

Consecutive Years with Positive Operating Performance

FY 2022’s positive operating performance of $159 million marks the favorable achievement of seven consecutive fiscal years of positive operating results. The emphasis on financial sustainability across the organization under Howard Forward, Howard University Hospital’s strengthening financial performance, and the University’s successful real estate strategy have played positive roles in these results.

Howard’s leadership is committed to further improvements in operating performance by increasing and diversifying revenue streams, increasing sponsored research, increasing philanthropy, and reducing costs through enhanced efficiency. All these efforts are to ensure continued financial strength to support the University’s critical mission.

FINANCIAL RESULTS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDED JUNE 30, 2022

Operating revenues over operating expenses “Operating Surplus”

FINANCIAL RESULTS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDED JUNE 30, 2022

Operating Results: Revenue and Expenses

In fiscal year 2022, total operating revenue increased 8% or $87 million to $1.15 billion. The components of revenue are academic services, including sponsored research from grants and contracts, clinical services, and public support – to include the federal appropriation and philanthropic contributions.

Academic services revenue increased 26% or $68.1 million to $326.8 million, due to increase in revenue from tuition and fees, net, grants and contracts, and a rebound of 415% in auxiliary services to $40.9 million, following prior years decline with fewer students on campus during COVID-19. Tuition and fees revenue of $193.4 million, presented net of financial aid, increased 18% from fiscal year 2021. The tuition revenue increases this past year reflect more student enrollment at Howard University. Grants and contracts revenue to support research, training and other services increased 7% to $92.5 million in 2022.

Clinical services revenues increased 3% or $8.2 million to $312.7 million, due to increases in hospital patient volume, rates, and collections. These increases were partially offset by declines in patient service revenue from the faculty medical practice and dental clinic.

Public support, including Federal and non-federal sources, represent 44% of the University's total operating revenues. Total public support revenues increased 2% or $10.8 million to $509.3 million. The Federal Appropriation, which accounts for 21% of Howard's total operating revenues, remained flat year over year at $244 million. Other public support is attributable to philanthropy from corporations and foundations, distributions from the endowment and other income, increased 3.8% to $265 million.

The University's operating expenses increased by $133 million or 15%, to $990 million for the fiscal year-ending June 30, 2022. Employment expense (i.e., salaries, wages, and benefits) at $477 million represent 48% of total operating expenses. Howard implemented pay raises for faculty and staff in FY22, and the University has budgeted for the next phase of faculty and staff compensation increases effective January 1, 2023.

Non-employment expense increased 36% or $117 million, to $444.2 million, due higher cost for professional and administrative services, and insurance and risk management. Primarily, the University's focus on management of cybersecurity risks, and greater investment and spend on research activities. Other non-controllable costs, interest expense, depreciation and amortization, increased 37% or $18.7 million to $69.2 million.

Operating revenues and expenses are detailed in the graphic below:

Howard University Hospital

Howard University Hospital experienced positive operating results in FY 2022 of $12 million, compared to $27 million in FY 2021. Patient service revenue increased by $12 million in FY 2022 due to increased Hospital outpatient and emergency care services. Additionally, in fiscal year 2022, the Hospital received other income of $10 million as part of funding the University received from the Department of Education for COVID-19 relief, $8 million in funding from a District of Columbia Medicaid Indigent Care grant, and $2.4 million in Provider Relief Fund (PRF) as part of the Coronavirus Aid Relief, and Economic Securities Act (CARES).

Adventist HealthCare, Inc., assumed responsibilities for the day-to-day operations of the Hospital under a three-year management service agreement in February 2020. The ongoing partnership is expected to continue the development and expansion of clinical services at the Hospital. The partnership includes continuing clinical integration and optimization and is expected to yield improvements in Hospital quality and patient satisfaction scores.

Improved Measures of Financial Soundness and Stability

As of June 30, 2022, Howard had $848.3 million in outstanding bonds. In March 2022 and 2021, the University issued the Series 2022A and 2021A Revenue Bonds in the amount of $300 million and $151.3 million, respectively. The proceeds from the two bonds will finance certain capital projects and campus renovations (the "Campus Master Plan"). The University invested $119.6 million and $77.4 million property construction, renovations, and upgrades in fiscal year 2022 and 2021, respectively.

As of June 30, 2022, the financial assets and liquidity resources available to meet general expenditures total $467.5 million, including $75 million line of credit and endowment distribution of $21.5 million. Howard continues to meet all its required debt obligations and debt service coverage ratios.

Changes to Net Assets

Net assets increased by $153 million or 13% to $1.3 billion as of June 30, 2022, which consist of $531 million and $759 million without and with donor-imposed restrictions, respectively. The year over year increase reflects $78 million and $75 million increases in net assets without and with donor restrictions, respectively.

Investments and the Endowment

As of June 30, 2022, Howard had more than $1.5 billion of investments under management, which includes the endowment pool, operating and pension retirement assets. Howard's investments are managed in diversified portfolios by outside money managers utilizing asset allocation strategies aligned with the University and pension retirement's liquidity requirements, risk tolerance and long-term investment return objectives.

Governance and oversight are provided by the finance/investment committee of the board, while day-to-day operations, asset allocation and portfolio management are administered by the Investment Office in accordance with stated Investment Policies and guidelines.

Howard's investment portfolio results in 2022 were subdued versus 2021 historical gains, yet no less impactful. In a year marked by unprecedented losses in both fixed income and equities, the portfolios significantly outperformed benchmarks and its peers. The drawdowns incurred in major asset classes were driven by an abrupt change in global monetary policy to restrict inflationary pressures once seen as transient. Despite significantly rising global rates, the diversification of the overall portfolio, manager selection and tactical positioning were helpful in preserving capital and avoiding capital losses.

The market value of Howard's endowment remained steadfast despite market struggles and managed to grow in FY 2022, with a total ending market value of $862.7 million versus $806.4 million in FY 2021. The endowment performance of -1.9% was in the top 14% of all peer endowment institutions for fiscal year 2022. The endowment value increase of $56.3 million in FY 2022 consisted of a $12.6 million loss completely offset by contributions of $56 million, transfers of $34 million and $21.1 million payment to the University to fund operations under the University's revised "spending rule" policy. Approximately 52 percent of Howard's endowment is governed by donor restrictions, while the remaining 48 percent is available for board designation.

The FY 2022 market value of the retirement pension fund declined to $607.1 million versus $689.4 million at FY 2021. Benefit payments during FY 2022 totaled $42.5 million and PBGC premiums of $2.6 million. Despite tightening by the federal reserve, rising interest rates and unprecedented losses in most major asset classes, the portfolio defended well leading to an improvement in funding ratio of 106% due to drop in present value of liabilities. No lump-sum payments were made to beneficiaries in fiscal year 2022. The trust fund has benefited from a diversified portfolio approach supported by liability-driven fixed investment strategies to match the pension liability profile.

The University's investment office continues to make progress in its administration and management of portfolio assets, augmented by rigorous oversight of investment management costs and fees.

Excellence in Financial Management and Administrative Operations

Under its strategic plan, Howard Forward, the University's financial management team has committed itself to ensuring financial sustainability and continuing to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of financial functions across the institution.

In FY 2022, Howard grew key revenue sources, including net tuition through increase enrollment, contributions, and research grants. Additionally, cost savings opportunities are well underway, such as the reduction of interest expense through debt refinancing and reduction of pension fee expense through a significant funding of the pension plan. Efficient and strategic use of Howard's financial resources enables us to reinvest in our mission, including faculty compensation increases and the continued renewal of our campus facilities for enhanced student and faculty experience and research. The results of our continued focus on financial sustainability are already starting to be reflected in our strong FY 2022 performance and are expected to continue into future periods.

Additionally, in FY 2022, Howard continued to upgrade and modernize its financial and administrative operations. Of note, the University continued its implementation of its new, state-of-the-art, enterprise resource planning (ERP) tool, Workday. Several modules went live in FY21, and several additional modules are expected to go live in the subsequent years. As this new ERP suite of applications begins to become the administrative norm of our institution, we expect enhanced user experiences, including streamlined and automated business processes, upgrades in transparency and enhanced management reporting across Howard.

Audited Financial Statements

Howard's FY 2022 financial statements have received an unmodified opinion from the University's independent auditors. This opinion signifies that the consolidated financial statements of Howard University are fairly presented in all material respects.
